Mistake One. "IF THE PARIS SUMMIT (next year) IS THE ANSWER !! ... IT MUST HAVE BEEN A BLOODY STUPID QUESTION!!"

Fact: The entire notion of Climate Change being URGENTLY life-threatening (and significantly man-influenced) = SUB-PRIME Science!!

In the last five years there have been four virtually useless climate summits, with absolutely nothing concrete achieved, these have been:--

1. Lima, Peru, COP20 ... approx. 5000 delegates (Source, to be confirmed)
2. Warsaw, Poland, COP19 ... 8 300 delegates & media (Source, cop20lima.org)
3. Doha, Qatar, COP18 ... 26 000 delegates (Source, cop18.qa)
4. Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, RIO + 20 ... 50 000 delegates (Source, Ronald Bailey, reason.com, 26/6/12)
5. Durban, South Africa, COP17 ... 14 500 delegates (Source, Willis Eschenbach, wattsupwiththat.com, 7/12/11)
6. Cancun, Mexico, COP16 ... 10 000 delegates (Source, leadershiponline.co.za, 22/11/10)
7. Copenhagen, Denmark, COP15 ... 100 000 delegates (Source, leadershiponline.co.za, 22/11/10)

Throughout this time however - and in excess of 210 000 international airline tickets expended !! - there have been over 600 instances of developments (both scientific & geo-political) from around the world, that reflect a waning interest in, and a rapidly-reducing scientific basis for, urgent action on climate change!!

Also, these are from over 150 different sources!! Please see the two appendices below for more information. Clearly this indisputably leaves the whole notion of ... "Humanity needs to take urgent action on climate change" ... on very thin ice indeed (pardon the pun)!!

- In short, this could quite reasonably be called "Climate Change 101" (x6) !!

Mistake Two ... "The right side of history" (Aust. P.M. Julia Gillard, September 2011.)

As my son would say; "This is wrong on oh so many levels"!!!!

Here is just a short list of these errors:--

1. The two great Labor war-time leaders, Curtin and Chifley, would be literally 'doing somersaults' in their graves right now!! I'd bet you a shilling (2011 equivalent) for every two-up game held at every RSL. on VP. Day in 1945, that neither of them would never tell a bare-faced lie one week before an election!!
2. Before Curtin and Chifley, let's not forget some of our truly insightful 'Fathers of Federation' -- Sir Henry Parkes, Sir Edmund Barton and Alfred Deakin, to name but a few. (At the risk of labouring the point ... those afore-said are clearly far more insightful than their modern-day contemporaries!!!) They too would also be singularly ashamed with the current political leadership of this great country that they had planned for, and worked so hard to unify!!
3. Even earlier still, both Copernicus and Galileo were criticised during their lives for their 'science-based' beliefs. (I.e. that the Earth revolved around the Sun, not vice-a-versa; and that the Earth was round, not flat – resp.) Subsequently of course their views have both been found to be proved 100% correct. Given what I have demonstrated above, clearly the afore-said scientific consensus on climate change from the early 1990's to late 2007 is disappearing quicker than a "mirage in the middle of the Sahara"!!

Finally, on a very personal note!! ...

Both Julia Gillard (former Aust. PM.) and Bob Brown (ex-Aust. Greens leader) have made a conscious 'life choice' of not having any children. By far the majority of Australians have obviously made the opposite choice of having a family, of various sizes. I, on the other hand, only have one child, a 28 year old step-son -- of whom I am very proud!! (Maybe partly because he agrees with me on the subject matter here-in, and maybe partly because we have both been proud members of this country's armed services – I have been in the Army Reserves for 13 years, and he was in the Navy for six years.)

In the last few years I (and my wife) have chosen not to have any children of my own.

Clearly I believe this places me in an almost unique position of being able to see both sides of the idealistic aka. obsessive-compulsive views of the Australian Greens re. population policy and equity. (Source: greens.org.au, Population Policy, parts; 4, 5, 9, 12 and 13.) Consequently, I strongly believe that neither Julia Gillard nor Bob Brown have the right to significantly impoverish my son and daughter-in-law for decades under an un-needed Carbon Dioxide Tax.

6: "COLLEGE'S OBSESSION WITH 'SUSTAINABILITY' IS UNSUSTAINABLE!!" "Rather than disciplining their students – and steering them back to the educ. that their parents are paying for – college administrators are complicit in the movement. As many as 685 instit'ns. have signed the American College and Univ. Pres's. 'Climate Commitment', which recognized 'the need to reduce the global emission of greenhouse gases by 80% by mid-century at the latest'. US. Students can earn credentials in sustainability in 1438 distinct college programs (inc. doctoral degrees). ... And it is costly. The report estimates that US. colleges and uni's. spend more than $3 bn. a year on sustainability-related programs and initiatives. American instit'ns. of higher learning were once just that – establishments that furthered the educ. of our young people. But now they have become palaces of absurdity, seats of fevered activism, incubators of left-wing causes. Education? That's become a quaint notion and maybe a secondary goal. This is a mistake that the entire country will soon be paying for as colleges cont. to turn out community organizers rather than graduating accomplished scholars." 28: "They used to be against us, but now Hollywood is on the side of the angels in mocking global warming. ... Politically, global warming peaked out at COP15 in Copenhagen when heads of state of countries accounting for the bulk of the world's GDP. were in attendance. They don't bother to attend now ... Kingsmen: The Secret Service, indicates that the cultural tipping point has been reached. It is now safe and commercially profitable for moviemakers to mock belief in global warming. The plot is that an evil billionaire by the name of Richard Valentine believes that humans, who cause global warming, are a virus killing the planet. To stop global warming, he sets out to kill a large proportion of humanity. His evil plan, which is the same as the dreams of the green movement, is thwarted by people who dress well and have impeccable manners. Instead of working against truth and beauty, Hollywood is now on the side of the justly righteous. 17: "A great cause unites the following: Prince Charles, Pres. Obama, the Pope, Arab Oil Sheiks, the UN., the EU., the Russians, the Chinese, Pacific Island Nations, most undeveloped countries, the glitterati of Hollywood, left-wing politicians, unrepentant reds, gov't. media, the climate research industry, Big Oil, Big Gas and the Green Blob. It must be something posing a clear and urgent danger to all humanity? No, the crusade that unites them all is the War on Carbon Fuels, (esp.) coal. The biggest group ... have no real interest in the facts ... they see climate alarmism as a great opportunity to achieve their goal of creating an unelected global gov't. (Google Agenda 21) ... This group inc. the UN., the EU., and left wing politicians and media everywhere. At a news conf. in Brussels recently, Christina Figueres, exec. Sec. of UN's Framework Conv. on Climate Change, admitted that the goal of env. Activists is not to save the world from ecological calamity, but 'to change the economic dev't. model' i.e. destroy what is left of free enterprise and private property. The next big group is anti-western failed states who see this as their big chance to enrich and entrench their ruling classes with 'climate reparations'. Then there are the enviro-entrepreneurs forever seeking new crusades to energise their supporters and get the donations rolling in – Greenpeace, WWF., Get Up etc. ... But imposing alarmist empire has a hollow heart – the globe has refused to warm, the alarmist 'science' is crumbling, their climate models are discredited, some researchers have been caught manipulating records and results, and the costs of green elec. are becoming obvious and onerous. The public is growing restive, gov'ts. can no longer afford the climate industry cuckoo in the public nest and the ranks of sceptics grow. Groups like UKIP. in UK., and the Tea Party in US. have abandoned the war on carbon. The climate revolt is spreading." By Viv Forbes, wattsupwiththat.com

1: CLIMATE CHANGE PREACHERS, FRUSTRATED WITH CONT. LOSING PUBLIC SUPPORT, NOW RESORTING TO NAME CALLING AND DEATH THREATS!! "I have been labelled a 'climate change denier' – a phrase which, since I happen to be Jewish, has particularly unfortunate connotations for me. And this is despite the fact I believe the world IS warming, and that CO2 produced by mankind IS a greenhouse gas, and IS partly responsible for higher temp's. ... (also) ... the threat posed by global warming has been exaggerated – chiefly because the grimmer comp. projections (have primarily been fictitious). ... I do believe we should invest in new ways of generating energy ... But I also think current 'renewable' sources (are) ruinously expensive ... will never slow the warming and are not worth the billions (they cost). ... Some would say this makes me a 'lukewarmer' – the jargon for someone who is neither a 'warmist' or a 'denier'. ... The result: vitriol directed my way, the like of which I have never experienced in 34 years as a journalist. Lately, it's become worse. The remark about my children killing me was made some months ago ... One of the online commenters posted: 'In a few years, self-defence is going to be made a valid defence for parricide (killing one's own father), so Rose's children will have this article to present in their defence at the trial.' ... But last week on Twitter, someone else wrote that he knew where I lived, and posted my personal phone numbers. Meanwhile, Dana Nuccitelli had written another vehement attack, this time against Matt Ridley, The Times columnist, Tory peer and fellow 'lukewarmer'. This fresh assault was illus. by the paper's editors with a grotesque image of a severed head. One who commented, called 'Bluecloud', said: 'Should that not be Ridley's severed head in the photo? ... Why are you deniers so touchy? ... Would the world be a better place without Matt Ridley? Need I answer that question?' In fact, Bluecloud is a Guardian contributor called Gary Evans, who is Greenpeace 'sustainability consultant'. Ridley complained, but the statements stayed on the website for at least four days. Comments in support of Ridley were removed by the site's moderators, because they did not 'abide by our community standards'. 28: "CLIMATE WARRIORS HAVE LONG AGO STOPPED BEING CIVIL. BUT WE SEEM TO BE ENTERING A NEW LEVEL OF RADICALISATION!! ... The church held sway over what is right and wrong for long after the Enlightenment, but it has been losing terrain. Others have stepped in to fill the moral vacuum. The env. movement is one. ... On offer are guidance on how to live your life, a tribe to belong to, a feeling of superiority over outsiders, and even a looming Armageddon, lest we atone for our sins, in the shape of climate change. Env. scientists (even some proxied from other areas of science) are cast in the role of priests, the trust in their narrow expertise extended to other areas of fact and value. ... Polarization is not conducive to sound policy. In Eur., the alarmed have the upper hand (aided and abetted by un-representative government - i.e. the EU.), climate policy is hardly scrutinized, and special interest groups are gorging on subsidies and rents. Anyone who questions this is put on par with those who deny the Holocaust! (Or perhaps worse, i.e. child abusers!) The consensus police patrol the media to isolate, ridicule and smear anyone who dares to raise a question. The Royal Observatory and the London Sch. of Eco. employ people, Ken Rice and Bob Ward, whose job it is, or so it seems, to attack others for their climate heresy. ... The Buddhas of Bamiyan were blown up by the Taliban in 2001. In 2014, Greenpeace activists damaged the Nazca Lines. ... Greenpeace happily beamed pictures across the world. And when it emerged that the world was not amused, Greenpeace's response was closer to damage control and cover-up than remorse and cooperation with the Peru gov. In Jan. 2015, a Greenpeace activist called for the beheading of a member of the House of Lords on the website of the Guardian. When challenged, he repeated the call. People who questioned the wisdom of these remarks were attacked or banned. The Guardian actively moderates its comments, but even though Gary Evans' calls to behead Matt Ridley caused a bit of a stir, it took the editors 32 hours to realize that death threats against political opponents is not really how we like to do things in UK nowadays. (The Guardian has since worked hard to try to erase the past.) ... There are now elements in the env. movement who are so worried about the state of the planet that they have lost all sense of proportion. ... Env. protection has come a long way since the early 1970's. Pollution is much reduced, and care for the env. is widely shared and supported - esp. in Eur. Sensible policies and respectable pressure groups are the best way forward to solve the remaining env. prob's. Green radicals risk throwing that away." By Richard Tol, richardtol.blogspot.co.uk

27: "Thanks to shale, energy-producing states have been the strongest eco. performers in US. over the past decade ... Only 13 of the 50 states produced more energy than they consumed in 2010, the latest year for which comprehensive data is avail., according to the US. Energy Information Admin. (EIA.). The other 37 were all net energy consumers, relying on some combination of interstate commerce or imports to meet the shortfall. The shale revolution and the renaissance in US. oil and gas prod. Have resulted in a stark contrast between the fortunes of the two groups. Eight of the 13 energy-prod. states improved their relative position between 2003 and 2013 when ranked by per capita gdp. The accounted for almost half of the 18 states that rose in the rankings. By contrast, energy-consuming states have fared poorly. None of the 10 states with the largest energy deficits has improved its relative eco. position since 2003. Nine of them have fallen in the ranking, in some cases sharply. Energy producers also dominate in terms of raising real output per capita over the last decade, accounting for six of the 10 states with the biggest increases." 27: LATEST EU. CLIMATE AGREEMENT APPEARS TO BE BINDING – BUT IT IS NOT!!
"Perfectly timed to the run-up 21st UNCCC. that will be held in Paris in Nov./Dec. 2015 ... by tricking other big nations – with the main focus being on US. and China – to accept massive CO2 reduction objectives ... in turn ... help to impose the 'planet-saving' green agenda onto a Euro. populace increasingly unwilling to shoulder the related burdens. ... In order to recognise the trick, one has to focus on some facts that are carefully (some would say deceitfully) left aside in the covering of the event by most mainstream media. First, Ger. itself is poised to fail drastically in its proclaimed goal of further reducing CO2 emissions. Obtaining reductions had been easy during the first years since taking over the fmr. comm. DDR. in 1990. This was simply the result of the dismantling of its monstrously inefficient, power-wasting industry, making it very easy to achieve reductions in CO2 emissions. Thus in 1990, the newly reunited nation had a CO2 output of 1024 mil. tons. But this boost has since dissipated, and while in 2009, the Ger. CO2 output had sunk to 786 mil. tons, it has since climbed back to reach 834 mil. tons in 2013. So Ger., the ind'l. giant of EU., is itself unable to meet 'climate killer' emission limits it tries to impose on others. Second, by resorting to a host of political tricks from blackmailing to bribery, eg. by granting reluctant eastern countries such as Poland generous free allocations of CO2 emission cert's., the political drivers behind the current 'climate change' policy were able to get their consent to the '40-27-27' package. But this came at a price: the losers of this power battle insisted upon inserting a hidden back door by implementing a mandatory consensus clause for the future. This means that the noble commitments Europe wants all other nations to adopt can at any time be blocked within the EU. itself depending on the will of individual EU. countries. ... So in a nutshell, Europe has set the stage for a political swindle of enormous proportions, aimed at fooling other big powers to adopt 'climate-saving' commitments the European countries themselves are in reality neither able nor willing to fulfil themselves"!!
